

Making our advice and support reach further into the community - and empowering young people to make a difference

In under twelve months, a new community group were able to transform themselves from a few bored individuals on the street, to a valuable and integral part of their community.

About a year ago, there was a particular group of young men in the Salford Jewish Community who had left religious college and found themselves outside the 'normal' framework of social activities like going to the cinema, watching TV, or going out drinking.

As a result, they decided to set up some social evenings, activities and teambuilding exercises... which attracted other young adults like them. The group began to grow and so did the time and the costs involved.

They turned to Binoh for help. Through Binoh's continued development support and advice, the group were able to form a management committee, open a bank account, adopt a constitution, and introduce a proper administration system. As a result, the group has continued to grow (both in size and in reputation) and are making a valuable contribution to their community.
